"All of a Sudden Peg" Given By the Ancient Order of Hibernians and Ladies' Auxiliary Members Delightful.

From the moment that the curtain rose on the first act of "All of a Sudden Peg," until the final drop went down long after eleven, the interest of an audience that taxed the capacity of the Myers Theatre Friday evening never lagged. It was the St. Patrick's day entertainment of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and Ladies' Auxiliary, and all the parts were acted by members of the two orders. From a dramatic point of view it was something far in advance of any previous effort ever produced in Janesville, and the work of the various members of the cast is deserving of more than passing comment.

Perhaps Martha Dooley, as Peggy, the impetuous young miss about whom the play centers, proved the most finished of all the cast. Her work was faultless and her stage poise remarkable. She lived the part she created and her clever interpretation of the lines marks her a young actress of exceptional promise.

Mary Kelleher, as Mrs. O'Mara, widow of Prof. O'Mara, B. R. S., the mother of Peggy, for whose future Peg conspired, had a most delightful bit of a broad and much to her part. She proved a most charming mother and as the fiancée of Anthony, Lord Crackenthorpe, taken by John McCue, was simply delightful.

Elizabeth Kennedy, as Lady Crackenthorpe, the mother of Anthony and Hon. Jimmy Keppel, his brother, was as dignified a matron seeking a future for her son as one could desire. She had wonderful stage presence and her lines simply poured forth as though to the manner born. Mrs. M. Kelleher, as Hon. Millicent Keppel, her daughter and sister of the wonderful Anthony and Jimmy, was a sweet, pretty, dutiful daughter, and added to her portrayal of the part by rare smiles and delightful bits of stage art. Della Shields, as the Hon. Mrs. Colquhoun, was simply a scream, and the only fault to find was she had so few opportunities to make her presence known.

John McCue, as Anthony, was simply a creation. His interest in spiers and perfect ease on the stage, his clever interpositions of facial expression at just the right moment, was worth provoking. It was a difficult part well played.

Philip Doherty, as the Hon. Jimmy Keppel, who finally won the love of Peg in spite of herself, was most excellent in his trying part. Upon the Hon. Jimmy and Peg most of the play hangs, and they had by far more lines to use than any others in the cast. Doherty never for a moment forgot he was the younger son Jimmy, who must either make a good marriage or go back to Ceylon, and when the plot finally developed and Peg was obligated to his love making, he was simply a creation. His interest in spiers and perfect ease on the stage, his clever interpositions of facial expression at just the right moment, was worth provoking. It was a difficult part well played.

Major Archie Phipps, retired, Jimmy's uncle, and one of the comedians of the evening's production, was taken by Frank M. Joyce. Had his name not appeared on the program one would have failed to recognize him as the finished and polished old vaudevillian, with his side-whiskers, monocle, floppy dress and ideas "for the good of the family" and "dash it all" expressions seemed taken direct from "dear old Lannon" just for the evening's entertainment, and not a resident of Janesville. To use a slang expression, Joyce was a "knockout."

John Doherty, as Archie, a friend of Jimmy; Charles Newton as Parker, the butler; and Lloyd Branks as Lucas, Jimmy's servant, had difficult parts well taken, which added to the success of the entire performance. In fact, the careful training of Mrs. Janet B. Day, who staged the production, was noticeable in every scene and almost every line uttered. It was as so natural, the stage presence of the entire cast so perfect, it was hard to realize that one sat and watched a home talent production and not a second or third season professional cast.

Organization Has Purchase Lot up the River Upon Which Will be Built a Summer Club House.

The Unique club of this city has taken out articles of incorporation papers being filed today at the office of the register of deeds. The club is organized without capital stock for the purpose of purchasing land and building a club house for the use of its members. The following are mentioned as the incorporators: John W. Henning, T. R. Costigan, F. R. Meyer, G. E. Batzinger, A. C. Benker, W. P. McCue, P. H. Putnam, T. F. McKeligue.

The club has already purchased a tract of land fronting on Rock river from Mrs. Leslie Peters of the town of Janesville, on what is known as the Garik farm several miles above the Four Mile bridge. Plans for the summer club house are being drawn and work will be started on as weather conditions are favorable.

LARGEST GOLD SUPPLY IS LOCKED IN VAULT OF GOVERNMENT MINT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]—Denver, Colo., March 18.—The largest single gold supply in the world—about $300,000,000—is locked in the vaults of the Denver mint. The vaults that hold this enormous wealth are among the strongest and with the most intricate locking and time devices in the world. They are considered burglar and bomb proof. Contrary to expectations, the great wealth in the building visited by thousands annually as a point of interest to tourists is not guarded by a large number of armed men. A few old soldiers, political appointees, are practically in charge of the building. In an emergency hardly a corporal's guard of powerful armed men could be raised in the mint immediately. But the strength of the vaults and their inaccessibility gives the officials charged with responsibility for the half billion no sleep or worry. The government accepts all gold offered at the mint. The price is fixed, $20.67 a fine ounce. It has not fluctuated in years. The same price rules all over the world. No part of the gold which has poured into New York since the balance of trade has been in America's favor has been stored in Denver. According to officials at the local mint, that gold mostly remains in the New York and eastern banks as a basis for credit. In case of threatened invasion, however, it is not improbable that the gold on both the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard would be removed to the strong Denver vaults.

HOG TRADE IS SLOW AT A SHADE ADVANCE

Best Grade of Swine Brings $9.75 in Trading This Morning—Receipts 10,000.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]—Chicago, March 18.—There was a slow demand for 10,000 head of hogs at this morning's trading, but prices ranged five cents higher at the opening. Best grades sold at $9.75. Bulk of sales were $9.55 to $9.70. Cattle and sheep receipts were light with small change in quotations. Following is a summary of prices:

Cattle—Receipts 120; market steady: native beef steers 100@10.50; western steers 98.00@10.25; cows and heifers 93.00@9.75; calves 98.25@10.75. Hogs—Receipts 10,000; market slow: above yesterday's average; light 9.15@9.70; mixed 9.25@9.70; heavy 9.25@9.70; rough 9.25@9.40; pigs 7.05@8.60; bulk of sales 9.55@9.70. Sheep—Receipts 5,000; market weak: 8.25@8.50; lambs, native, 9.75@11.50.

Butter—Higher; creameries 30@36. Eggs—Lower; receipts 14,868 cases; cases at market, cases included 18@19; ordinary 18@19; prime 19@19. Potatoes—Unchanged; 34 cars. Poultry—Alive: Unchanged. Timothy—$4.50@7.00. Clover—$10.00@15.75. Pork—$21.25@22.75. Lard—$10.20. Rice—$11.00@11.35. Rye—No. 2 42@43; standard 42@43. Barley—61@75.

FRIDAY'S MARKET.

Chicago, March 18.—Yesterday's hog market closed 10c lower than Thursday, the decline being continuous since market opened a week. Packers are expecting liberal receipts and lower prices next week. Best swine at $9.70 stood 40c lower than previous Friday. Closing trade heavy, with 5,000 head left over, some of them held since Monday when they sold to speculators at $10. Fancy 144-lb. western sheep at $3.25 yesterday were within 5c of the record price for westerns of 1910. Average price of lambs this week stands highest on record.

Average price of hogs at Chicago, was $9.57, against $9.66 Thursday, $9.96 a week ago, $6.83 a year ago and $8.86 two years ago. Average price of hogs at Chicago was $9.57, against $9.66 Thursday, $9.96 a week ago, $6.83 a year ago and $8.86 two years ago.

Cattle Receipts React. Beef cattle closed weak, with prices 10@25c lower than best time of the week. Some 1,222 lb. yearlings sold at $9.50. Butcher stock closed 30@50c below best time Monday. Veal calves, 50@75c lower than a week ago. Quotations: Choice to fancy steers... $9.25@9.95. Poor to good steers... 7.80@9.20. Yearlings, fair to fancy... 8.10@9.60. Fat cows and heifers... 6.40@8.75. Canning cows and heifers... 4.00@6.25. Native bulls and stags... 5.40@8.50. Feeding cattle, 600 to 1,100 lbs... 6.00@8.25. Poor to fancy veal calves... 7.75@10.75. Hog Receipts Are Large. Receipts of hogs yesterday at 23,000 including 3,700 direct to packers from other markets, were a third beyond general expectations. Prices were largely 10c lower, as buyers were from Thursday and a big decline in pork being bearish factors. Armour's drove, 222 lbs., cost $9.47. General quality good. Quotations: Bulk of sales... $9.50@9.65.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT—WRITTEN AND PUBLICATION AUTHORIZED BY W. P. LANGDON AND TO BE PAID FOR BY HIM AT THE RATE OF 40c PER INCH.

TO THE VOTERS OF JANESVILLE:

Efficiency is the great watchword of American business life. It is drilled into all the young men of today.

We are told that to the young men the nation looks for its future success. They are being taught to think for themselves.

They are not parts of vast corporations, mere bits of machinery which in time wear out and are cast aside. Their talents do not lie in simply one direction.

They are told to think for themselves. To meet emergencies. It is not simply a question of management of the water works that confronts the councilman in nomination. There are other questions of equal moment that will come under the consideration of the man who is elected at the coming election.

The selection of candidates should not be controlled by any question of religious, fraternal or any secret organization. It should be made upon the merits of the candidates alone, not past performances for previous masters, in some one particular line.

The public demands efficiency. Who is better equipped to give this than a young man carefully trained in that direction. You do not buy an old horse to do your work but you select a young strong steed. Why not use the same judgment in handling city affairs?

Pick out the best material possible. Look to the future. Look to the influences that are behind individual candidates and why they seek the office.

Do Not Be Influenced By Sentiment, But Use Judgment

I am a young man, comparatively. I have been carefully trained to meet just such requirements as will confront the next councilman. I am not backed by any element or individual but desire to stand on my own merits.

I feel qualified to fill the position of councilman. I am not above listening to reason in making decisions nor am I biased by personal obligations that would work to the detriment of my efficiency.

I ask your support at the primaries on March 21st, assuring you of absolute loyalty to the best interests of Janesville.

W. P. LANGDON

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

WRITTEN AND PUBLICATION AUTHORIZED BY W. W. HYZER AND TO BE PAID FOR BY HIM AT THE RATE OF 30c PER INCH.

MR. VOTER--It's Your Vote That Will Give You Efficient or Inefficient Management of the Water Department for The Next Six Years.Be Sure To Vote at the Primaries Next Tuesday and Let Your Vote be Cast for the Man You Deem a Careful, Capable Business Man and an Economical, Efficient Business Manager.*WILLIAM W. HYZER IS THE MAN FOR THE JOB*UNBIASED COMMENT ON MR. HYZER'S ABILITY:

"PRACTICALLY ALL THE ACTIVE WORK AND MANAGEMENT IS IN THE HANDS OF THE SUPERINTENDENT BY WHOM IT APPEARS TO BE VERY EFFICIENTLY CARRIED ON." 7 WIS. R. R. COMMISSION REPORTS. PAGE 446.

VOTE FOR WM. W. HYZER
NEXT TUESDAY AND YOU
WILL VOTE FOR THE MAN WHO IS ESPECIALLY FITTED FOR THE JOB.

WILLIAM W. HYZER

YOU know the affairs of the City of Janesville, under the Commission form of government, have been likened to those of a huge corporation with each branch of the business operating under the skilled supervision of a department manager and the whole carefully managed by a directorate composed of the department heads, appointed by the stockholders, or in this case by the Voters.

NOW comes a time when a change is about to transpire and it is the duty of every citizen to do his utmost to secure the very best management of his city's business.

GREAT corporations employing men at salaries in five figures are careful to make no mistakes. They are as absolutely devoid of sentiment in choosing men to fill important positions as they are in buying the raw material which goes into their product. They select men of ripened judgment, who have had years of experience, who are progressive, who are economical and absolutely dependable. They select men who have been tried and not found wanting.

IT so happens that the term of one of the department heads of the City of Janesville expires this spring, the one which has had charge of The Water Department and the opportunity is at hand for the voters of this city to apply the same cold, hard business logic in selecting a man for the job as do the big business corporations who want results from their employees.

THE Water department is a big branch of the city's business and requires the services of a big man to handle it. Mr. William W. Hyzer is that man.

FOR 18 years he had charge of the water plant when it was under private ownership and he is thoroughly familiar with every small detail connected with the successful and economical management of this big business. He took over the management of The Water company when it was not a profitable proposition and put it on a paying basis through his sheer ability as a keen business man. He had entire charge of the works, employment and direction of labor, purchasing of supplies, etc. and HE MADE GOOD.

MR. HYZER knows more about the Water department and its needs than any other man in Janesville. He knows where every foot of pipe is located, where every hydrant is, and a number of other equally important things which are not on paper, knowledge he alone possesses.

IT is a known fact that Mr. Hyzer does not belong to the "chair warming" class. He is a tireless worker, possessed of brains of the constructive type, plenty of initiative, a high sense of honor and integrity. In addition to his supreme knowledge of the management of the water plant he will fit in harmoniously in other branches of the city's business and will apply his ability as a constructive business man to all phases of the city business that will come under his attention, should the voters see fit to select him.

MR. HYZER wants to go on record here as saying that he has no fads to promote and no interests to serve, but wants to give to the citizens of Janesville a clean, red-blooded, virile American business administration in city affairs.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Associated Press, the greatest press association in the country, is supported by some eight hundred newspapers at an expense in excess of two million dollars a year. This list of papers represent the leading daily papers of the country, and it is interesting to note that politicians, manufacturers and the government as a popular medium of publicity.

Every speech delivered by the president or members of his cabinet, is sent to these papers from a week to ten days before the date of delivery to be held until released by wire.

When the Board of Railway Arbitration was in session, a year ago, daily reports were sent out to this list of papers, both by the railroads and the Brotherhoods and for the past three months the same parties have flooded the offices of these publications with arguments for and against the eight hour day, now under consideration.

For two years prior to the opening of the Panama exposition these papers were deluged with printed matter, and a large appropriation for advertising found its way into waste paper baskets in the newspaper offices all over the country, for the day of free publicity has passed, and publishers refuse to be the goat for exploiting all sorts of schemes from radical reform movements to gold brick enterprises.

The contest being waged between the "wets" and "drys" of the country, has opened up an extensive field for writers who have an ambition to rush into print, and the dry advocates are inspired with the notion that every publisher who believes in the moral uplift should be glad to publish anything which in his judgment needs to be published.

The "wets" are equally ambitious, and so the Manufacturers and Dealers' association, which means the distillers and dealers, have established an educational publicity department, and through it their literature is scattered broadcast among the publishers of the country.

It is interesting to read some of the arguments used by the whiskey men, in which they attempt to prove that drink is a blessing and not a curse to humanity. One of the latest is an article from the pen of Gustavus Myers on the real causes of industrial accidents, in which he maintains that drink is not a prominent factor.

Be this as it may, the fact is well known that manufacturers throughout the country, as well as the railroads, and other large employers of labor, are doing all they can to discourage the drink habit, many of them refusing to employ men who drink.

Statistics are used to prove all sorts of contentions, and their significance depends in large degree upon the slant given by the manipulator. Accidents are of daily occurrence in the industrial world, and while muddled brains and unsteady hands are not always responsible there is no reason why they should enter into the causes at all.

It is idle to claim that the booze habit contributes anything to a man's mental or physical equipment. It may stimulate him the same as the whip stimulates the horse, but this kind of energy is soon exhausted.

The state of Kansas has been dry so long that the new generation has come to maturity without knowing what a saloon is. This means that the young men of Kansas have been saved from the drink habit because they never had the opportunity to form it.

The fact is significant that a boy never goes into a saloon for a drink alone, unless he has an induced appetite, and these cases are extremely rare. Drinking is a social habit, and the appetite for it is an acquired habit. The modern saloon is an attractive club room and its free and easy hospitality appeals to the boy in his restless age when the boy companion means more to him than the home.

It will continue to be the social center for a large class of both boys and men, until the church wakes up to its duty and opportunity. A club house may not be a prayer meeting, but it may be made a wonderful means of salvation. Some of the railroads are competing with the saloons in division towns, with marked success. They have not a page for the churches which can be followed to advantage.

Many good people are perplexed to know why the state in which they live can't adopt and enforce the same prohibitory laws as the South state enjoys. The solution is not difficult to trace.

The state of Kansas was settled by a class of intelligent people of literary tastes from New England and the middle west. They cared as much for the moral atmosphere as they did for the broad prairies. For ten years they fought the grasshopper plague, stayed by the job and won out.

Today every farm house in Kansas has its library and piano. Every school house is a social center, and the standard of intelligence, as well as of morality, is of a high order.

The saloon would be as much out of place in Kansas as the pest house. Conditions in Iowa are much the same as in Kansas, and Nebraska is not far behind. These three states continue to attract immigration, because of their high moral standards.

The basis of all moral law is public sentiment, not the sentiment of the reformer, whose vision is so narrow that he overlooks all kinds of intemperance save one, but the sentiment of the rank and file who unite and demand, as the voice of one man, that the moral atmosphere must be clean and wholesome.

States not so highly favored as the three mentioned, have discovered that it is better to regulate the saloon, in localities where local opinion does not prohibit, than to attempt to enforce laws in defiance of public sentiment.

If the state of Wisconsin ever becomes a dry state it will be because of national-wide prohibition and this is true of a dozen other states.

The wave of prohibition, which has swept over the country, during the past two or three years, is more or less misleading to people who believe that the prohibition party is responsible and entitled to credit. This party, as a political party, is weaker today than at any time during the past decade.

The democratic party, which is in control in the south, made the southern states dry, and the issue was self-protection. In the state of Mississippi the prohibition party cast less than fifteen hundred votes.

Changing conditions in the north are largely due to economic causes. Employers of labor draw the line, and results follow. The moral good accomplished, however, is of a self-defensive nature. The men who are compelled to cut out booze, or throw up their job, have discovered that a bank account is better than a bar account, and the drink habit soon ceases to annoy them.

Much ado has been made about Russia and her attitude toward temperance in prohibition. The manufacture of vodka, the national beverage, but Russia is entitled to no credit on moral grounds. The issue was economy and efficiency.

The world war has deadened sensibilities and lowered the standards of morality to such a degree that it will not recover for half a century. Drink is bad enough, but the brutality which murders innocent women and children is worse.

There are tens of thousands of illegitimate children in the war zone. Many of the fathers of these little waifs are rotting in the trenches, while the mothers are consoled by the statement that the sacrifice of virtue is an honor and not a disgrace.

The aftermath of war presents a dark picture, and many new problems will demand a solution. The world has descended to the lower levels, and it will be slow to recover the ground that is lost. When the white-winged dove of peace comes to abide the work of reclamation will begin, and it will be of absorbing interest. In the meantime it is well to be temperate in all things.

Say tum-tum-tum-tum or something like that, and the words will come back to you and nobody will know the difference. Now, don't forget." On exhibition day little Mary electrified her audience with "And she wears a wreath of roses round her tummy-tum-tum." She did as she was told.

A Regular Cuss.
A true story is always funnier than a "made up" one, and the story of a lady who had eye trouble and went to consult an optician brought to light the fact that an estimable Grand Rapids lady has sued for divorce twice and is going to make a third attempt. Her first effort was on the grounds of "abuse," the second for "exertion" and her final attempt will be based on "unsupport." That husband of hers must be a regular cuss.—Coopersville Observer.

Tough Luck.
I'd sit around the billiard hall and loaf the way for a long time. And life to me I'm sure would be just one long, grand sweet song. I wouldn't hustle to the mill like any common job. I would be some aristocrat. If my wife had a job.

I would not grab the dinner pail and start to work at 6. I'd sit around the corner store, and argue politics. I'm sure I could become a boss. In fact, a real nabob. If I could spend the time at it, and my wife had a job.

I would become an autocrat. I'd just pass out advice. I'd solve all knotty problems. Without money, without price. I'd pose as one great financier. With John I'd raise hob. I could do all of that and more. If my wife had a job.

I guess that I can never join the gang down at the store. Who have been runnin' of this world for 20 years or more. I've got to earn my way. I'm just a common job. With no one to look out for me. My wife ain't got no job.

Concerning Heavies.
I do not cough, I do not sneeze. I've had no cold this year. Because I wear my B. V. D's. All winter without fear.

Last year I changed, when it grew cold. To heavy underwear. I had the grip for six long months. And went not anywhere.

I do not cough, I do not sneeze. Although I know I should. Any who I wear those B. V. D's. You bet I knock on wood.

The Closed Door.

They had just returned from their honeymoon; a trip of bliss, joy and happiness, all three. He kissed her goodbye as he stepped into the office, and murmured many endearing things into her ear, all of which she kept there.

The day was slowly fading, and a feeling of terror stole over her. A grim waiting of she-knew-not-what-impagination already boiling over. Oh, why did her mother warn her? Why did they not forbid her marriage? It was too horrible to contemplate—that they willfully sacrificed her life to their ambitions. Impossible! And yet.

"Oh, if she dared only open that door, just to satisfy her wild imaginings. Oh, if something would only happen to relieve the tense strain she was laboring under. And she must face it alone—alone."

Yes, she must see what was going on behind that door—yes, if the sight would kill her she must! The mystery must be solved, if her death would result—or even the loss of her husband's love.

She started for the door, but her knees gave way under her, and she collapsed on the floor. Ah, brave heart! She arises! And again crosses the floor to the door, full of portentous silence. What dread suspense! Beads of icy perspiration dashed to the floor and splashed back again. Oh, she must—she must!

Slowly ten more minutes dragged their weary length along—they seemed ages. When, work a strength born of a desperate resolve, she rushed across the floor and flung open the door. A cloud of smoke rushed from the oven. Her first pie had burned to a crisp.

MISS HAZEL LE QUATTE WEDS ARCHIE MORRISSEY TODAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Delavan, March 18.—The friends of Miss Hazel Le Quatte were surprised to hear of her marriage this morning to Archie Morrissey of Elkhorn at the Episcopal residence of St. Andrew's church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Buckley and was witnessed by Miss Jennie Cobb of this city and Frank Porter of Elkhorn. Miss Le Quatte has been employed as clerk in the Littlefield jewelry store for some time and Mr. Morrissey is an employee of the C. M. & St. P. Railway company as night operator at Elkhorn. He has been promoted to station agent at Janesville, where the young couple will make their home after a short honeymoon trip to Chicago. The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarthy of Darien, passed away at the home today, being but two days old. Burial will take place Saturday morning in St. Andrew's cemetery.

Thos. White and family will move to Chicago tomorrow, where Mr. White has for some time been employed. It is understood that they will close their residence here at the time being. The Delavan Condensed Milk company's auto truck has been taken out of the garage storage and is being put in readiness for the season's milk hauling.

Miss Freddie Fleming, an office employee of the Bradley Knitting company, is nursing a badly sprained ankle which she sustained by turning over on her foot while on her way to work Thursday. Miss Fleming will be unable to attend her duties for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. George Miner were in Elkhorn between trade on Thursday. The high school pupils, who are enthusiastically planning a high time on what they called rough neck day, were surprised when ordered to return home and don their usual school attire. That ended the fun for those implicated.

The marriage of T. B. Davies and Miss Florence Jones will take place on Saturday. Some mischievous culprit erected a Mexican flag above the Bradley Knitting mill during the night, which

STOP AND THINK, MR. VOTER

The position of councilman is not one to be talked of lightly.

The candidate should stand on his own merits solely.

It is not a question of religion, fraternal or secret organization membership that should influence the voter.

We are not to choose a man to simply run the business end of the Janesville Water company. That is but part of the work.

Talk about efficiency in this direction is all bosh. The man who is to be elected councilman must have other requirements as well.

The candidate should stand on his own merits. He should not be backed by or influenced by any public service corporation at all.

The city finance, the lighting system, the streets, the sewers and in fact every line of activity is to be considered in this connection.

I am not backed by any individual interests. I am making this campaign on my own initiative and I stand on my own platform believing I am thoroughly equipped for the position I seek.

If you believe in an efficient, honest and economical management of city affairs for the best interests of the tax payers I solicit your vote on Tuesday next.

In submitting my candidacy for councilman for your consideration, permit me to say that I own no property outside the city of Janesville, hence I am in hearty accord with all who have the best interests of the city as a whole at heart.

If elected I shall always bear in mind that I am the city's hired servant and pledge you the most active service, of all the ability, energy and experience at my command; not only in regard to the water plant, but also in all the departments in which I may have a vote and influence.

My motto is Efficiency, Economy and a "Square Deal" for all. I most respectfully solicit the support of those who believe that I am competent to fill the position.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT. Written and publication authorized by Roy M. Cummings and to be paid for by him at the rate of 30c per inch.

STATEMENT of ROY M. CUMMINGS

TO THE VOTERS:

In the articles that I have written and published in this paper, I have tried to point out in a general way the duties and responsibilities connected with the office of Councilman which is to be voted for at the primary election next Tuesday. In soliciting your vote for Councilman I do so with a full knowledge of the duties of the office. As I have stated before I have had seven years experience in Municipal government and I feel that I am fully competent to perform the duties of the office.

I have not argued that some other man was not capable of doing the work as well as myself, but I do maintain that a person who has had actual experience in any line of business has the advantage over one who has not. If I am nominated and elected it shall be my earnest endeavor in the future, as it has been in the past, to see that the people receive a dollar's worth for every dollar spent. It has been the aim of the other members of the Council, as well as myself, to conduct the business of the city in just as economical and business like manner as though it was our own private business, and I think most every one will admit that we have succeeded to a very marked degree.

I have not based my arguments on personal grounds, but upon my service to the people. I have not indulged in personalities of any kind, but have conducted a clean campaign in all respects. Upon these grounds I earnestly solicit your support at the primaries March 21st, 1916.

Respectfully yours,

ROY M. CUMMINGS.

Statement of JOHN J. SHERIDAN

To the Voters of the City of Janesville

As the voters of the City of Janesville want to select a person into whose hands they would place its affairs, one who had proven by his actions to be capable of performing all of the duties imposed upon him by his acceptance of the office.

Mere desire to do all that is best for the City is not sufficient, for all have that desire; but there must be with that desire to do what is best, evidence by action and that your candidate is able and is willing to do all that lies within his power to perform and all that is required to be done for the welfare of the City.

Experience, and having passed the test of good and faithful public service in the past, affords the best proof that can be furnished as to the realization of your expectations for the future. If you were about to secure the service of an employee in your private business, your first duty to yourself would be to inquire what your prospective servant had accomplished in previous delegations of trust.

The undersigned has had a schooling of eight years as an Alderman of the City, and respectfully invites criticism of any action of his during that period that was not taken for the best interests of the City.

I respectfully solicit your support at the primaries, March 21st, 1916.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES REGULATED BY LAW

CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT PRE-SCRIBES REGULATIONS FOR CANDIDATE'S EXPENDITURES.

A DIGEST OF THE ACT

With Primary Election Impending in Janesville a Resume of Statute
Will be Appreciated.

Expenditures of candidates for office both before the primary and the election are strictly regulated by the Wisconsin statute known as the corrupt practices act. With a primary election impending in Janesville in which there is a large field of candidates for the office of councilman there have been a number of inquiries regarding the law prescribing what is legal and what is not legal in the conduct of a political campaign. For the information of the general public the following digest of the law explaining its main provisions, has been prepared for the Gazette:

"The corrupt practices act covers several pages of the Wisconsin Statutes, and any summary of it, comprised within reasonable limits, would necessarily be quite incomplete. Some features of it, however, should be made plain so that candidates for office may not unwittingly violate the law.

"Among other things it is provided in the law that no person shall receive or accept of any money, property or other thing of value, or any promise or pledge thereof, constituting a disbursement made for political purposes contrary to law. An act shall be deemed to have been done for political purposes when it is of a nature, is done with the intent to influence or tend to influence directly or indirectly, voting at any election or primary. The disbursement is construed to mean and include every act by or through which any money, property, office or position or other thing of value passed or is directly or indirectly received or accepted.

"The law provides that a candidate may make disbursements for hotel and traveling expenses, postage, telegraph and telephone expenses, compensation for services, maintenance of headquarters and hall rentals, stationery and clerical assistance, for badges, posters and distributing the same, for campaign advertising in print and on signs and actual expenses of public speaking.

"There isn't anything in the law, however, that authorizes disbursements, or the work of men at other places, or for conveyances to carry men to and from voting places.

"As the Supreme court of Wisconsin recently said: 'The Corrupt Practices act does not prescribe any new qualification or test of eligibility for office, its purpose being to require an aspirant to resort to honest means to secure a nomination or election.' It is therefore, that a candidate for office to have for an aid, primary or election should not try to influence voters by furnishing them cigars, drinks or refreshments of any kind, or giving them any other thing of value, or make any promise or pledge of office or of valuable favor, as to do so would be illegal. He should not hire men to work for him at the polls or furnish conveyances or other vehicles to the polling places. It seems to be conceded, however, although some lawyers doubt it, that if a friend of a candidate has a conveyance of any kind, he may transport voters to and from the polls, provided he makes no charge for it, although the law says, in substance, that no person or group of persons other than the candidate or his personal committee, or any party committee, shall make any disbursement for political purposes other than through such person or committee.

"If one were elected to an office or succeeded to an office, and it were afterwards decided that he had violated any of the provisions of the Corrupt Practices Act, judgment would be entered declaring the election void and ousting and excluding him from office."

NO DECISION MADE ON PAVING ISSUE

Council Does Not Meet Friday Afternoon to Decide on South Franklin Street Paving.

No decision was reached by the city council yesterday over what type of a pavement will go down on South Franklin street. The council met at noon but no decision was reached.

The next regular meeting date is Tuesday, the day of the primary election, and it is not known whether the council will meet before the election in that date and cast a vote on the matter.

From what can be learned it will be either brick or no improvement, except possibly repairs on the street.

This statement is made on the sentiment expressed in the board of public works at their last meeting. Taken as indicative of the vote to come in the council, which has the final decision, there is a possibility, however, that the council will not retract their order for brick and order in an asphaltic-concrete paving with a heavy top course, which would be somewhat cheaper than brick.

Friday morning the moving of a house by a traction engine was stopped on North Washington street by Superintendent of Streets P. J. Goodman, as the street was being ripped up and water in the residential lighting system where a hundred power incandescent lights will be placed. The entire schedule of lights was gone over with and the street was closed for a distance of 100 feet, and a distance of 100 feet was made in the afternoon an inspection trip was made by the commissioners over the city to obtain first hand data on the new system.

As soon as the first shipment of lighting posts are received work will be started on the new ornamental lighting system for the business district, and the street will be closed off the main streets, and as soon as the traction company make arrangements to care for their trolley wires, and the new equipment is received, the street will be opened up and the removal of the remaining power and telephone posts.

During the afternoon Mayor Fathens and Alderman Cummings met with an employee of the electric company and a number of other men in the residential lighting system where a hundred power incandescent lights will be placed. EXPECT CLUB WOMEN TO ATTEND LUNCHEON

Co-operation of Various Women's Organizations in City is Counted on at Coming Gathering.

Arrangements have been made for the club women's luncheon which will be held at one-thirty o'clock Thursday afternoon, March 23, at the Grand Hotel. The affair is receiving the cordial support and co-operation from the different clubs of the city and a large attendance is anticipated.

It is the first time that an attempt has been made to get the members of the various organizations to meet in person. The ladies' movement, the guests of honor will be two ladies from Beloit, Mrs. H. C. Murdock, president of the City Federation, and the lady who is chairman of the rooms committee of the City Federation.

Both will give information regarding the line of the work Beloit has been doing in civic matters. An opportunity will also be given for local club women to express their views and to voice the attitude of their clubs in regard to the club room and rest room movement. The whole affair will be very informal and the discussion will be held around the table. The luncheon meal has been finished. The luncheon will be held at 1:30 o'clock at the Grand Hotel on Thursday, March 23rd, and the tickets are 50 cents.

Local women interested in community welfare are invited to attend the luncheon whether they are club women or not. Reservations may be made through the committee on Monday, Mrs. H. D. Murdock, Mrs. J. P. Thorne. The special committees of the different organizations having the sale of the City Federation must report to Mrs. Murdock or the committee on Monday so they may plan how many to prepare for. All ladies who have not purchased tickets are urged to do so by Monday noon.

HUNDREDS OF WOMEN AT CATHOLIC MISSION

Morning Masses and Evening Instructions at St. Patrick's Catholic Church Attacked Greatly.

Fifteen hundred women nightly crowded the women's mission held at St. Patrick's Catholic church. At attendance at this retreat has been most pronounced and is perhaps the most successful in the history of the held by the congregation. All evening services it was found necessary to seat the women on the altar railing steps, in the vestry, in the chapel and in the Sisters of St. Joseph's convent, and in the small winter chapel at the rear of the edifice.

The morning masses at five and eight o'clock were attended daily by both men and women. Women were permitted at these services, and no mission for the women closes today.

Tomorrow at the 10:30 o'clock mass will open a mission of similar length to the men and boys of the congregation. The Rev. Mr. Miller, and companion, of the Passionist Fathers, from Chicago, are excellent speakers, and a world of good may result from their sermons and instructions. They are also giving the success of the women's mission and express a desire for a similar enthusiasm to be shown by the men and boys of the congregation.

The evening services of instructions, sermons, stations of the Cross and benediction last week were featured by the attendance of a large number of those of Protestant belief. A warm welcome was accorded them, and men of other than a belief in Catholicism are welcome to attend the masses and instructions this coming week.

J. H. S. DEBATERS
LOSE AT MADISON

Negative Debating Team Met Defeat at Hands of Madison High School Yesterday Morning.

Janesville high school debaters had poor luck in their first debate yesterday morning at Madison with the Capital City high school. They lost the contest by a margin of fourteen points. The local team was composed of Paul Lawrence, Wright and Russell Griffin. The question that was argued was as follows: Resolved, that the United States should subsidize its foreign trade.

Both teams presented some strong arguments and the contest was close all times. Janesville upheld the negative side of the question. Mr. Green, who coached the team, accompanied the debaters on the trip. On next Friday night the local affirmative team will meet the negatives here at the high school.

Dr. E. A. Billig, who has secured the Dr. Michaelis office, wishes to announce that his name does not appear in the present issue of the telephone book. The phone numbers are Rock County, 711; Bell phone, 816.

Storm, scent of battle in his nostrils, stood on the footboard as the sturdy switch engine started. On it came, accelerating fast from one, two, ten, twenty miles an hour up to thirty. With the safety valve popping and smoke streaming in a cloud from the stack, the engine with Rhinelander's movable hotel in front of it, bore down on Cassidy's house. Cassidy, himself, sunning on a pile of Seagru's ties, with his pipe in his mouth and his two checks in his pocket, little suspected what was coming. But Rhinelander's men saw and understood it all. A mighty yell rose from the delighted gang as the engine and car sped on. Storm, bareheaded, his black hair streaming in the sun—clinging with one hand for safety as he swung from the end of the foot-board and stretched his left arm far out as a semaphore—signaled the cab.

The engineer checked heavily. A stream of fire ground from the driving wheels; the engine jumped in the grip of the brakes and the outfit car, released, headed like a catapult straight at Cassidy's house. Men jumped back as it hurtled past. The next instant, crashing and smashing ahead, it tore completely through Cassidy's house. A great cloud of dust and timbers rose as from an explosion and the next moment what had been a house lay torn into a thousand pieces along the right of way.

Like a spent cannon ball the outfit car drove on; men, amazed, watching its wild flight. It struck the end of the rails, hung for a moment poised, trembled and toppled headlong from the embankment into a borrow pit.

Storm sprang from the foot-board of the engine, and before the dust of the crash had settled, called his men forward. Rhinelander's gang responded with fresh hope and energy. Seagru saw with wrath how completely he had been outplayed. He called his men together to rush the Copper Range forces for possession of the Cassidy yard. They ran forward with picks and shovels, and it looked to Storm as if blood might be shed in spite of everything, when the long, shrill whistle of Soda Water Sal was heard down the line, and within a few moments Helen brought the old engine to a stop at the end of the steel.

The deputies, followed by Rhinelander and his attorney, poured out of the gangway. Storm met his boss. Just what view Amos would take of the summary measures he had adopted to clear their right of way the young man felt now a little uncertain about. Rhinelander looked ahead for the familiar landmark which he had just acquired at the rather extravagant price of ten thousand dollars and asked where the Cassidy house was. "Ah! gahn 't' hell," interposed Cassidy (who stood listening), pathetically.

Storm pointed to the wreckage littering the right of way and told the story of what had been done by Seagru and how his play had been defeated. Rhinelander's face lighted with enthusiasm and Helen's eyes danced with sheer joy. Seagru, disgruntled and beaten, had seated himself on his own right of way on the pile of ties vacated in excitement by Cassidy. In another hour Rhinelander's men had made their title to the disputed property good.

Cassidy, bewildered by the extraordinary turn things had taken, started to walk back to where Seagru was, but on reflection, he changed his mind and, lighting his pipe, sat quietly down on a part of the roof that had for many years given him a peaceful shelter, to view the vengeance so swiftly taken on his former abode. He had less than Seagru had to worry about. With both checks in his pocket, he felt sure he must realize on at least one, and he sat on the scene long after the men had quit work, thoughtfully smoking his pipe and reflecting on the queer things that may happen in a real railroad war.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

Partly because he believes that the silent is a step ahead of the spoken drama, and partly through an intense desire to see himself as others have seen him on the legitimate stage, Edward H. Southern, foremost Shakespearean actor on the English speaking stage today, is the latest to succumb to the lure of the once-despised movies.

This is regarded as the most important in significance since the movies began to rival the spoken drama in interest. Other legitimate players have deserted the legitimate under the spell of money lure and other considerations, but when a man of Southern's prominence in the theater consents to a celluloid, the final breastwork of the enemy is down and the movies can now consider themselves the conqueror of the legitimate.

FANNIE WARD IN "FOR THE DEFENCE"

Giving another example of her versatility, Fannie Ward, will appear shortly in a photoplay entitled "For the Defence," in which she plays for the first time on the screen the role of a feminine detective.

She will be seen as Fidele, a young French girl who lands in New York and meets with strange adventures. She is the witness of a murder, which the one man who befriends her in the hostile city is falsely accused. Frantically, she runs away from the scene, meets a man accused later and returns in time to appear "for the defence" and by her testimony succeeds in freeing him.

Jack Dean, Camille Astor, Horace B. Carpenter and a large cast of principals appear in support of Miss Ward in this production.

"The Quality of Faith," a forthcoming picture is the story of the evolution of a fashionable minister from the snug security of wealthy surroundings, through the throes of a labor strike, the attraction of the alienated crowd, the lure of liquor to a fatigued body and discouraged soul and the disappointment of misplaced affection and trust, to the final finding of contentment and love in the heart of a woman who had been cleaned by his erstwhile fiancée. The woman who brings about the minister's redemption and her own rehabilitation is played by Miss Gertrude Robinson. This is the first time she has played opposite Mr. Gaden since "As a Woman Sows."

AT THE APOLLO.

Blanche Sweet on Monday. "The Ragamuffin" has been selected as the title for the next Jesse L. Lasky production in which the distinguished star, Blanche Sweet, will appear at the Apollo on Monday.

This title is entirely in keeping with the play. As a girl of the slum who has been brought up with thieves and then attempts to turn "honest," Miss Sweet is seen in the role entirely

E. H. Southern in character of Hamlet.

E. H. Southern, foremost Shakespearean actor on the English-speaking stage, will soon desert the footlights for the movies. He will begin work about May 1 and continue to work through the summer until four features are completed. Among the supporting stars will be Anita Stewart, Edith Story and Lillian Walker.

hilitation is played by Miss Gertrude Robinson. This is the first time she has played opposite Mr. Gaden since "As a Woman Sows."

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Golden Chance" on Wednesday. How a girl from the slums is transformed into a member of the fashionable smart set and is ardently courted by a wealthy young bachelor, is the theme of the gripping society drama.

"The Golden Chance," which will be seen at the Apollo on Wednesday under the direction of the Jesse L. Lasky company, with Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid in the stellar roles.

This thrilling play of a modern Cinderella, is said to be one of the most lavish and unusual productions ever made by the Lasky company. From the depths of poverty, the girl is introduced among the leaders of society, only to be cast back again by her drunken thieving husband. How she is saved by a wealthy young bachelor who has fallen in love with her, must necessarily be seen to be appreciated.

AT MYERS THEATRE. What makes you go to the theatre? Because you want relaxation, isn't it?

You get more relaxation from laughter than you do from tears, don't you? Isn't it a fact, then, that you prefer plays that are all laughter?

95 per cent of the ninety-five million people in America will answer "Yes" to this question.

Well then, here is a big tip. See "It Pays to Advertise."

300,000 people have seen this play and they've told 300,000 more to go and see it.

"It Pays to Advertise" is a farce. It was written by Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett. It was produced by Cohan and Harris at the Geo. M. Cohan theatre in September, 1914, where it ran for a solid year.

The fun in "It Pays to Advertise" begins the minute the curtain goes up on the first act, and it keeps up a furious pace until the end of the play.

It's all about the son of a wealthy soap manufacturer, who is a bit of a boob—the son—not the wealthy soap manufacturer.

Son has been out of college for four years and won't do a thing but race auto cars, fly aeroplanes and flirt with the girls. Father wants him to go to work and make a man of himself. Son does—but how?

Ah! that's the plot of the play and if you want to laugh till honest-to-goodness tears roll down your cheeks, go take a peek at it, at the Myers theatre March 23.

It's the best grouch annihilator ever put in play form.

"It Pays to Advertise" is as crisp and clean as a hot cross bun and it is filled to the margin with witty lines and funny situations.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"The Strike" which appears at the

Myers opera house Sunday matinee and night March 19, is written by one of the leading professors at Harvard university at Cambridge, Mass.

The Strike was the prize play at the Castle Square theatre last season and had a run there of 235 performances. It is a play that appeals to the heart of every working man, woman or child. It is the treat of the season, so don't miss it.

IS JANESVILLE AN UNAPPRECIATIVE CITY?

Are Cohan and Harris correct in saying; "Janesville will turn out if given the right shows?"

Played a return date in Rockford last night to capacity!

Word is being passed around the country that Janesville is "dead" theatrically; that high-class attractions play to empty benches. Investigation of the business done by attractions in Janesville for the past year substantiate this claim of the knockers.

What have the citizens of Janesville to say? By this is meant the citizens with civic pride who don't like to hear their home town "roasted."

Now and then you hear on the street: "Give us the big city companies and we'll turn out. We intend to stay away from the cheap companies."

THERE'S THE SITUATION IN A NUTSHELL!

Those citizens of Janesville who are waiting for a big city company and who are sincere in their claim they will patronize high-class shows will be tested at the

A NOVEL

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright by The Century Co.

Alix, dressed in a filmy blue and white housegown, stood in the middle of the room. With one hand upraised, the other outstretched, she seemed to be poised, equally ready for advance or flight. Her eyes passed swiftly over Gerry's face, swept searching down to his feet and back again to his face. For weeks she had been wondering. Terrible things had come to her mind. Alan and Gerry, with his heartless note, had conspired to mystify, to terrify her. All the joy she had looked forward to in Gerry's home-coming had turned into a bitter pain. They had not known on the hill how she was suffering. Only Kemp had seemed to understand a little and had brought his drop of comfort to her.

As her eyes searched Gerry the sense of impending calamity left her. He was well, well as she had never seen him before. Except for that he seemed almost weirdly familiar, as though only a good night's sleep lay between him and the morning of three years ago when he had bullied her until she had fought back and overwhelmed him.

A hundred little differences went to make up this solitary change. The flush of too many drinks had given way to a deep healthy glow, the eyes were deep and grave instead of deep and vacant, the broad shoulders that had taken to haughtiness were braced in unconscious strength. Every line in the body that she had seen start on the road to grossness had been fined down. The body was no longer a mere abode for a lingering spirit. It had become a mechanism, tuned to expression in action. It was not the body of a time-server, Alan's sole word of comfort came back to her. "I never thought the old rook would ever loom so big." What force had done this thing to Gerry? She felt a pang, half envy, half remorse. If she had been wise, less than that, if she had been merely sage, could she not have saved Gerry to himself and spared her faith the rest of the three long years lost out of their youth?

Gerry stood erect by the door, one hand still holding the knob. Why was he waiting? Alix's raised hand went slowly out to him in welcome but he did not move. She smiled at him but his eyes remained steadfast and grave. A lump rose in Alix's throat and then, as pride came to her aid, a flare of color showed in her cheeks. Her lips opened. What could she say to hurt him enough, to pay him back for this added, unjust rebuff? She knew so little about this new Gerry. How could she wound him?

And then he spoke. "Will you please sit down? There are things I must tell you." Gerry had blundered on magic words. There is no moment so emotionally tense that a true woman will not drop the immediate issue to sit down and listen to the unfold things she has wanted to hear. Alix was a true woman. The flare died out of her cheeks. She sank into a chair beside the dully shining mahogany table and with a nod of her golden head motioned Gerry to a seat opposite her. She watched the easy swing of his body as he moved across the room. Gerry's mind was in sore conflict, but a body in perfect health has a way of taking care of itself.

Gerry sat down and gripped the edge of the table with outstretched hands. He looked steadily into Alix's eyes. The moment he had foreseen had come. Alix sat in judgment. She planted her bare elbows on the table, laid one hand, palm down on the other and on them both rested her cheek. Her head with its heavy crown of hair was thus to one side but also tilted slightly forward. That slight forward tilt gave strength to the pose and intensity. A curious, measuring look came into Alix's eyes. She was silent and she was waiting.

Gerry dropped his eyes to the table and began to talk. "The things I have got to tell you," he said, "begin with that day—our last day. I went out and walked for hours and realized that I had been rough and unjust and to blame. I came over to the avenue and was standing looking at some flowers when you passed. I saw you in the plate-glass of the window. I turned around to make sure. I recognized your trunk. I followed you to the station. I saw Alan signal to you. I saw you get into the train."

Gerry stopped. His premise was finished and he found that he had no tongue to tell the things he had thought—the long argument of the soul. He realized that all that must be left out. He must confine himself to mere physical facts, let them troop up in the order in which they had come upon him and file naked before Alix. She must dress them as she saw fit, as her sympathies and her justice directed. He would give her but the ground-work, plain simple words such as he could command, telling the events that had come upon him and how he had met them.

Of the trip out he had nothing to say but of Pernaubuco he told her in detail. Somehow it seemed the least he could do for the filthy and beautiful city that had given him an unquestioning asylum. He told her of the quay, the Lingueta, with its line of tall, stained houses, its vast plane trees and its cobbled esplanade, the stage where the city's life was in perpetual review. His words came slowly but they left nothing out. Unconsciously he created an atmosphere. A light of interest burned in Alix's eyes. She saw the changing scene. It charmed her to restfulness as it had Gerry.

She smelt the stacks of pineapples, the heaped-up mangoes, the frying fish, and through his eyes she saw the blue skies dotted with white, still clouds and glimpsed the secret, high-walled gardens with their daring hibiscus, trailing fuchsias, fantastic garden cockcoombs and dark-domed mango and jack trees. She sat with Gerry and, later, on the long slim coasting craft she listened with him to the creak of straining masts and stays and to the lap of hurrying waters. She followed him up the San Francisco, felt his impatience with Penedo, took the little stern-wheeler and learned the fascination of a river with endless, undiscovered turns. They came to Piranhas. Here she felt herself on familiar ground. Letters from the consul's envoy had made this place hers. Unconsciously she nodded as Gerry described the tiers of houses, the twisted, climbing streets, the miserable little inn.

Gerry told of the happy days of ponderous canoeing and of the unvarying strings of fish. He lingered over those days. Thus far he had brought Alix with him. He felt it. Now he came to the morning when he must leave her behind. He told her of the glorious break of that day, of the sun lighting through swirling mists. She saw him standing stripped on the sandspit. She saw the canoe nosing heavily against the shore and his pyjamas tossed barelessly across a thwart. She knew that she had come to the moment of revelation. She breathed softly lest she should lose a word for Gerry was speaking very low. Then he showed her Margarita. Margarita as he had first seen her, kissing and kissed by dawn.

A hard light came into Alix's eyes. Gerry felt himself suddenly alone. He went doggedly on. He told of the chase and the capture, of how he and the girl had seen the canoe drift out into the clutch of the eddy and swirl out into the river and away. He told her of how they laughed and Alix shrank. Gerry paused, his brow puckered. He wished he could tell in words the battle of his spirit, the utter ruin of his downfall. He could not and instead he sighed.

There was something in that sigh so eloquent of defeated expression that it succeeded where words might have failed. It called to Alix with the strong call of helpless things. It drew back her mind to Gerry. With him and the girl she threaded the path to Fazenda Flores. Its ruin sprang upon her through his eyes. With him she discovered the traces of an ancient ditch, with him and the old dorky she dug along that line through long, hot months. She grew to know Lieber as the tale went on and finally to love him because of all things Lieber else's love—most. She amused herself with Kemp and his drawl. She tried to keep her thoughts away from Margarita and at the coming of Margarita's boy, she winced.

As he finished telling of the coming of the Man, Gerry stopped short. The thought came to him with tremendous force that Alix too had gone through that for him. The impulse to get up and throw himself before her and on his knees to thank her almost tore him from his seat but he fought it down. He hurried on with his story. He told of the coming of Alan and of the revelation he had brought. And then in a choked voice and only because he had set himself to tell the whole truth he pictured the flood, the death of Terr

Blue, and the overwhelming by the waters before his very eyes of Margarita and the Man. Then he arose and with hands braced on the table leaned towards Alix. "I have told you this so that perhaps you may understand what I am going to tell you now. If the flood had not come—if Margarita and the Man had lived—I would not have come back."

Alix sat very still and studied Gerry's face. He had finished the task he had set himself to do and he was suddenly very tired. His eyes dropped as though from their own weight and then he raised them again to her inscrutable face.

"Well?" he asked after a long pause.

"Well?" replied Alix.

Gerry's stalwart figure drooped. "It is quite just," he said, "after all that, that you should not want me. I have spent the last weeks making myself ready for that. You waited for me; I didn't wait for you. If you do not want me, I will go away."

Alix rose slowly to her feet. She looked very slim and tall in her clinging gown. To Gerry she looked very cold. "Before you go," she said, "there is just one thing. I wish you would kiss me—once."

Gerry's body straightened and stiffened. He stared at her grave face with wondering eyes. Then he felt a strange tingling ripple through his blood and before he knew what he did he had swept her from her feet, crushed her to him, brushed the crown of hair back from her brow and kissed her eyes, her mouth, her throat. He was rough with her. He was bruising her body, her lips, but Alix clung to him and laughed. Then suddenly all her slim body relaxed and slipped through his arms to a little white heap on the floor. She began to sob. Gerry stooped down, picked her up tenderly and laid her on the great leather couch. He knelt beside her. On one arm he pillowed her head, with the other hand he sought hers. "Please, Alix," he begged, "please don't cry."

"I'm not crying," sobbed Alix. "I'm laughing."

Gerry smiled and waited. Soon Alix became quiet. Her eyes closed. She drew a long, quivering breath and then she opened her eyes again and her lips broke into the old dear smile, the smile of an opening flower. "I am tired—tired," she said, "but I believe I'm almost hungrier than I am tired."

"I'm glad you said it first," replied Gerry, giving serious thought to the fact that he was faint with hunger himself. "Ever since some funny Johnny wrote, 'Feed the brute,' we men have been shy about eating our stomachs. It's four o'clock. Hours after lunch time."

"Really?" said Alix, nestling down closer to his arm and letting her smiling eyes wander over him. "How well this suit fits you. There's something about it—It isn't, is it?"

Gerry nodded. "Same old suit. By the way, when I came in John said you told him to telephone to the club and say you wished to see me. What made you think I would go to the club first?"

Alix looked puzzled. "I didn't. I didn't tell John to telephone." She paused, still puzzling, then her face cleared. "Why—poor old John—he's getting very old, you know, Gerry. That was three years ago I told him to telephone—the day you never came back. It must have been the suit. He saw you standing there in the same suit and three years became as one day to the old fellow."

Gerry sighed. "Alix, do you want those three years to become as a day to us?"

Alix shook her head slowly from side to side. "No, dear, I don't. They have given me—given us both—far more than they took away." She put her bare arms around his neck, drew him down and kissed him. "You do not know yet all that they have given you. You think you have come back and found me, a fritterbug butterfly in a great empty house. But you've found only my abandoned cocoon. I'm not here at all. I've packed myself into the dearest little bundle of pink fat, yellow curls and chubby legs, and left the bundle on Red Hill."

Gerry nodded but he was grave and silent. Not in a day nor a month could he altogether forget the Mau.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Gerry had always been quiet but during the long drive from the station to the Firs, his silence amounted to a penetrating stillness. Alix felt it but it did not depress her; she knew herself to be in the presence of a communion. Gerry was devoting the hour of his return to the scenes of his boyhood to a silent consecration. These cool valleys and hollows; the low road, with its hurling accompaniment of hidden waters; the embowered still nave of Long lane, were as the ancestral halls of the Lansings. It was right that he should do homage to the memories they evoked.

To his mother Gerry made no explanations. He knew that to her it was enough that her boy had come back. When Mrs. Lansing released him, Alix caught his hand and led him up to the nursery. Together they looked down upon their sleeping child.

Gerry, Jr. was fat to the verge of a split. His curly tow head was tousled and on his brow a slight perspiration testified to the labor of sound sleep. His arms were outstretched. His legs had links at the knees, they were so chubby. His petulant little mouth was half open, disclosing tiny teeth.

"Isn't he a beauty?" asked Alix a little loudly, wishing he would awaken.

Gerry nodded. With his eyes still on the child he put his arm around Alix and drew her to him. What Margarita had done for him, Alix had done. As he felt her frail body quivering in his embrace, as he looked back and measured the sacrifice by what the awful night of the coming of the Man had taught him, he was overwhelmed by a new humility. He turned Alix's face up to his. His lips moved in an effort to thank her but words failed him. Alix understood. She lifted her arms around his neck and drew his head down. He held her body very close as he kissed her, softly, adoringly. Alix hid her face against his shoulder for a moment and then threw back her head and shook the tears from her eyelashes. She smiled through wet eyes. "I am afraid he's not quite perfect—inside. Such a temper. Gerry, I'm afraid he'll grow up into a man about town and awfully wild."

She turned grave eyes on Gerry, Jr., and her brows puckered. "What do you think?"

Gerry smiled. "From the looks of him I predict he gets his letter in freshman year—center on the football team."

"Yes, perhaps," said Alix thoughtfully. "Everybody calls him Fatty already."

It was from Alan that Gerry learned that Kemp was still in town closing up his connection with the orchid firm. Gerry wired him, begging him to come to The Firs for a few days before he went West. Alix had told of Kemp's word of comfort.

After the first excitement of getting home was over Gerry found himself restless with the same restlessness that had attacked him during the days at Piranhas. He tried for a solution in the same way. Day after day, long before the rest of the Hill was awake, he was off for a ten-mile walk.

Dinner Stories

A hungry Frenchman in a New York restaurant wanted eggs for breakfast, but had forgotten the English word. So he got around the difficulty in the following way:

"Vaiterre, vat is dat walking in the yard?"

"A rooster, sir?"

"Ah! and vat you call de rooster's wife?"

"The hen, sir."

"And vat you call de childrens of de rooster and his wife?"

"Chickens, sir."

"But vat you call de chicken before dey are chickens?"

"Eggs, sir."

"Bring me two."

"Now, then," said the auctioneer, holding up a pair of antique, silver candlesticks, "give me a start."

"Ten cents!" came from a voice at the back of the room.

"What!" exclaimed the horrified auctioneer.

"Ah," said the bidder, in an undertone, and with a chuckle, "I thought that would give him a start!"

Miss Wheat, the new teacher, was hearing the history lesson which dealt with the career of George Washington. Turning to one of the scholars, she asked:

"James, what was Washington's Farewell Address?"

The new boy arose with a promptitude that promised well for his answer.

"Heaven, ma'am," he said.

The Spanish Moors.

When the people of the rest of Europe were little better than barbarians the Spanish Moors were in the midst of a splendid culture. As early as the tenth century this country was the source of learning for all Europe. Their libraries, schools, arts, sciences, luxurious refinements and all round material and intellectual advancement differentiated them from the rest of Europe as clearly as ancient Greece was from the peoples that surrounded it.

A STATEMENT FROM ONE OF OUR WELL KNOWN CITIZENS

Stop right here—this is the proof you've been seeking. Mr. Samuels, a well-known grocer, gladly states his opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills for the benefit of his fellow townsmen. His story is one you can easily investigate. Read it.

F. C. Samuels, grocer, 989 McKee Blvd., Janesville, says: "My kidneys didn't act as they should and I had backache and pains across my loins. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was relieved. Since then I haven't had any more backache and my kidneys have been doing their work right."

(Statement given Sept. 23, 1910.)

Over two years later Mr. Samuels said: "I haven't had any need of a kidney medicine since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

URGES MASS MEETING OF BADGER PATRIOTS

USHER'S PROPOSAL MEETS EN-THUSIASTIC RESPONSE FROM ALL QUARTERS.

ALLIANCE INFLUENCES

On Wisconsin Legislators and Members of Congress is Difficult to Explain—Week's News
Comment.

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, March 18.—The idea of a non-partisan mass meeting of Wisconsin Americans that I spoke of in last week's letter brought speedy responses. One of the first from my old home, La Crosse, expressed the general sentiment—"Just let us know when, and we'll come smoking in early telephone call Sunday morning said—"That is the thing! It is high time the men of this state who are Americans should let the world hear from them. When I can help let me know." One of these men was a Grand Army veteran of the civil war, and a Republican in politics. The other was a Democrat. They typify Wisconsin. I want it understood that I am not attempting to lead a political movement, but I am ready to "fall in line" and help a patriotic movement and am in full sympathy with the plan and the purpose. My understanding of the word "American" is that it includes every man, no matter where he was born or who his father was, who loves his country and recognizes the stars and stripes as the emblem of the best government and the greatest people on God's earth. That includes all the Poles in this state, all the Bohemians, all the Belgians, all the Norwegians, and everybody but a noisy handful of German sympathizers and conspirators who are a disgrace to the German blood of Wisconsin.

A mass meeting, if held, should be called by the co-operation of representative men in all parts of the state. It should not be a sensational or emotional gathering, but a carefully planned and deliberate assemblage of men of patriotism and courage; men who are proud of Wisconsin and unwilling to rest under any such stigma as has been put upon the state by the German-American Alliance, the Free Press and Germania newspapers and the Wisconsin delegation in congress with the shining exception of Senator Paul Hustling.

Such a gathering of Americans may be a patriotic necessity and prove of the highest value. It will be well for men of the right stamp to confer together in the various parts of Wisconsin and stand ready to move during July or August, Wisconsin, and Milwaukee, especially, have gained most unenviable notoriety throughout the country as camps of sedition, and this reputation is arousing a deep feeling of outrage and resentment in the breasts of thousands of people, who are wholly indifferent to any merely political consequences of expressing their feelings to the country. They want the true sentiments of Wisconsin publicly expressed and widely understood. They want to stand up and be counted.

German Alliance Influence.

In view of the evidence that has been made public of the propaganda of the German-American Alliance in Wisconsin, and Leo Stern's own boast on June 26, 1915, that, through the influence of the Alliance, no laws had been passed by the previous Wisconsin legislature that this extra-constitutional government of his disappeared, it is interesting to know that there were only thirty-two, one-fourth of the legislature, who had any German blood in them. An examination of the biographies of the Wisconsin delegation in congress shows but one man, John J. Esch, who could offer his German blood in pollution of his recent vote to embarrass the president. Paul Hustling's father came from Luxembourg, of Belgian lineage. I am told, and of the rest, La Follette bears a French name; Nelson a Norwegian name; Leavelle is of Swedish extraction; Burke, Cary and Kelly are of Irish lineage; Cooper, Stanford, Frear and Browne sound like English names, and Kropf has, I believe, a Bohemian ancestry. Just why Leo Stern's "Wisconsin Idol" of controlling legislators for the interests that he represents should have such influence as he and his co-workers of the Alliance boast is a conundrum that must be left to him and them to explain. It is certainly a very doubtful compliment to a legislature and to our representation in congress, both of which are almost solely of Wisconsin birth, and four-fifths of whom have no German blood in their veins. If they take orders from this German propagandist, as the public says they do, it would be interesting to know how he hypnotizes them.

Changes on the Lake.

The opening of lake navigation, which is near at hand, will see great changes. Lake lines of steamers that have been in operation for fifty or more years will have disappeared and in their place will be one great package freight company that has purchased from the railroad about 85 per cent of all the craft that have hitherto been in the field. The Erie railroad lake line was the lineal successor of the first organized railroad extension to the water. That road began to sail ships almost as soon as its western terminal was established at Dunkirk, nearly eighty years ago. So far as the railroad are concerned, I am told authoritatively, that they have no regrets. They have felt for some years that the public had the best of it and it remains to be seen whether one great independent lake transportation company can better serve the people as the railroad lines have heretofore. With their steamships touching at Wisconsin ports the Erie, Pennsylvania, New York, Central, Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley and other roads have each had, during the season of navigation, a division of their road in joint operation with Wisconsin. It looks as if the change from this intimate local relation to a virtual steamship monopoly was likely to prove a distinct loss to Wisconsin shippers. The change is the result of one of those too frequent legislative attempts to manage business that endeavor to "hit it if it is a deer and miss it if it is a calf," and wind up by killing some human being among the bushes, whom they did not see at all. The law was passed to regulate commerce on the water, with the traffic of the Panama Canal in view. The result has been to create a new vessel monopoly on the great lakes.

The Republican field of candidates for the supreme bench quickly followed Mr. Coffey and got out of the running. W. D. Corrigan of this city being the only Republican left. He is expected to get the La Follette vote, which is not a great expectation. He is a Milwaukee man, and there are two other Milwaukee men who have filed nomination papers, Judges W. J. Turner and Eschweiler. Judge Eschweiler of Racine is a candidate and so is Judge C. A. Fowler of Fond du Lac. It looks as if the Democrats wanted to split the field and let the La Follette bunch get another justice. They have a majority of the court now.

After Rowing Regatta.

The city of Duluth is after the National Rowing Regatta for 1916. To quote an eastern official of that organization, "They are after it hammer and tongs. Every one in the city, from mayor down to the newsboys, is doing his bit." There are good reasons why the Zenith City should have the regatta. Last year, at the Springfield meet Coach Jim Ten Eyck's oarsmen won forty-eight of the fifty-one prizes. In recognition of this victory the association should give them the next regatta. Duluth has an ideal landlocked harbor that affords a course for a crew race surpassed by none. Its boat club boasts a grand stand that will seat 4,000 people. The paid admissions made possible by this stand would go a long way toward defraying expenses, and no other city can offer such accommodations for spectators. Duluth, moreover, has staged several big aquatic attractions. The city is well located geographically. The promoters are planning to offer a one-third refund on every visiting crew's railroad fare and will run a special train for the rowing shells and their crews from New York, picking up contestants along its route. These are, it is claimed, no other cities actively contesting Duluth's campaign. These reasons are ample for awarding it the Zenith City the regatta which it covets, and the national association, it is felt, will recognize them. If it does, Duluth will go rowing mad and will make the event the most successful in its history. The enthusiasm over the victory of their crews last summer is proof of that.

Elbert Hubbard on the Erie.
(Advertisement.)

Elbert Hubbard, who perished on the Lusitania last year, wrote "The Romance of a Railroad" that is filled with the marvels of eight-four years of railroad progress. The Erie railroad was the first line across New York to Lake Erie, and here is the way he speaks of it:

"In 1882 a bill was introduced in the New York state legislature authorizing a railroad to be built from tidewater to Lake Erie. This road was suggested by the success of the Erie Canal. It was to be called the Erie railway. The original idea was that it was to be owned and operated by the state of New York, just as the canal was owned and managed by the state. Our socialistic friends will here note that this country had a close call on government ownership in this very start of the railroad enterprise. Those who have the time and inclination will find some very racy reading by going over the official records of the years 1882, 1883 and 1884. In actual truth, the Erie railroad has been a topic at Albany, more or less, in every session since. The money for this first railroad connecting the lakes with the ocean was to be raised by appropriation, aided by a lottery. Next, towns were to be established as they were along the Erie Canal, and the government was to sell town lots and use the money for extending the railroad on ten miles, where another town was to be built. It will thus be seen that the idea of a town at the terminal of a railroad was the gist of the whole enterprise. How long it would take a town to grow up they did not know, but no one imagined that Lake Erie would be reached by the a railroad in less than twenty years. One man offered to bet his farm it could not be done in hundred years. And we hear of a certain solon from Oneida county, who lived on the banks of the Erie Canal, hotly condemning the whole proposition as a move in restraint of trade and an endeavor to bankrupt the canal. One line of transportation between New York and Lake Erie is enough, because it can carry all the people who want to go," he cried. An he sat down amid a wild burst of applause. However, money was appropriated for the survey.

Today the Erie with its 1,000 miles of double track, from New York to Chicago, and its four track, open terminal tunnel through the Bergen Hill, is one of the great traffic terminals of New York. It is one of the greatest trunk lines between the middle west and tidewater, and its business still grows.

MILLIONAIRE MATCH MAKER TO ESTABLISH FARM COLLEGE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Barber, O., March 18.—Ohio C. Barber, millionaire maker of matches, now 74, plans to make "the best farmers in the world" at "the greatest agricultural school in America." Barber is drawing plans today to convert his famous $3,000,000, 3500 acre farm, Anna Dean, into an agricultural school adjunct of the Western Reserve university, Cleveland. According to Barber his institution will rival M. A. C., Illinois, Wisconsin or Cornell in agricultural teaching and experimental work.

Barber's farm was named in honor of his first wife, Anna Dean. The farm is now operated with experts in charge of the various departments. It is stocked with 1600 prize cattle and hogs. Barber will start construction of dormitories this year. He will retain control of the institution until his death.

"I expect to live a long time yet," said Barber, who recently married his secretary, aged 23. "I want to live on the farm the rest of my life. I'm a farmer first and last. I hope to have the new college under way within a year."

SIR MACREADY ADJUTANT GENERAL HAS A HISTORY
AS A BRAVE SOLDIER

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, March 18.—Sir C. F. N. Macready, who has just been appointed Adjutant General of the British Army with a seat on the War Council, is a descendant of the famous actor Macready. In appearance he is a soldierly, with one ear severely mutilated by a wound. His brown moustache is just beginning to turn grey. In manner he is blunt but sincere. He has the carriage of the Scotch soldier, and it was in the Gordon Highlanders that he obtained his regimental experience.

General Macready has been brought back from the front to be a pillar in the scheme of drastic reorganization of British army control which is being quietly put into effect by Sir William Robertson, the new chief of staff. He was well known to the British public before the war as the soldier to whom was entrusted the difficult task of controlling the big labor outbreaks in Liverpool and Manchester. When the crisis in Ulster was at its worst he was called on to take a post as chief resident magistrate in the disturbed district.

The General has a reputation as a wit, and was credited with a widely circulated jest some months ago, when there was a good deal of talk in army circles about the delay in the appearance of Kitchener's so-called new army at the front. According to the story, Macready one evening while at dinner at British Headquarters at St. Omer, put the question: "Which of the great neutral Powers do you think will join in first—Italy or Kitchener's Army?"

OLD CHICAGO CAB DRIVER
QUITS BECAUSE OF TAXICAB

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Chicago, March 18.—Discouraged by taxicab competition and unable to sell his old fashioned cabs and carriages even for a song, Abel Deming poured kerosene upon them and burned them up. Deming has been rich and poor several times since he came here during the World's fair. In 1893 Deming was flat broke except for his horses. He sold it, came to Chicago and working at odd jobs, saved his money and bought a horse and cab. The horse and cab became a livery stable and then fortune smiled and coins rained merrily into his pockets. Then the race course lured him and Deming rubbed elbows with John W. Gates and John Drake. Then the bubble burst when the fair was over and the race course saw Deming no more. A few years passed and Deming still carried passengers through the streets of Chicago until one day a snorting automobile whizzed past his cab. At the age of 71, Deming is left with but a meager part of the money he once had. He tried to sell his carriages, offering to part with an outfit worth $25,000 new, for $5,200 but there were no takers, so Deming drew his carriages from their storage shed, poured a can of gasoline over them and touched a match to the relics of the heyday of the horse.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, March 18.—Switzerland is drinking American milk almost exclusively and using her own for the manufacture of milk chocolate. It became known here today. A representative of one of the greatest chocolate firms in the world, arriving from Switzerland today, declared that Swiss chocolate factories are working night and day to supply an overwhelming demand. Swiss milk, being better adapted to the industry, is not consumed by the Swiss public at all. American milk has taken its place. The great increase in the chocolate demand has partially remunerated Switzerland for the loss of her tourists. Some canons are actually becoming prosperous, despite the war. American milk, exported to Switzerland, is sent by way of Havre and Liverpool.

3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Means Gallant Going Over All Kinds of Roads

The swift, silent breathing of the unique engine of the new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers is faster than that of any other car on the road.

Without gasp or throb, this weird, aluminum-lunged beast inhales a mist of gasoline through the tiny nostril in its carburetor so rapidly that it can spin its motor at the supreme velocity of 3400 revolutions per minute.

High engine speed in a racer means just one thing—track-burning car speed.

But the high-speed engine of the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers means automobile attributes not measured in mere speed alone.

It means the whole gamut of performance most desired by men and women who demand more from a car than a beltful of racing records.

Chalmers engineers have translated superlative engine speed into the composite boon of pick-up, poise, and power.

The versatility of this vehicle has won it the vigorous O. K. of every person I know for whom it has performed.

The 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers does everything a car should do. It wrings 18 miles of gallant going out of every gallon of gas, a mile a minute if you're keen for speed.

Always there is the feeling of velour beneath my accelerator foot.

This car has the liveliness of a spirited mare, with a Pullman-like stability that keeps your back-seat passengers from rattling around like peas in a pod, which happens in so many other light, fast cars.

This able Six is heavy enough and so finely poised that its four wheels stay always on the ground, with direction as straight as a bullet.

By transforming this car's superabundance of brute might into all-round performance, Chalmers engineering has saved you from $150 to $200 worth of fuel per year.

So it's a sane and sensible buy from every slant—and the smart ones whose sense of values hasn't been blunted by prosperity are dropping around with their check-books.

$1050-Detroit.

Color options: Oriford maroon with hood to match or Meteor blue with black hood.

Children's Serial Story

CHILDREN'S WEEKLY STORY

(By Paul Holmes.)
Splinter Does It Right.

"This not," snapped the young electrician. "It's too," jeered Winsor. "If it ain't, why don't you answer that? What other reason is there? He's? You thought you'd fool me, didn't you?"

"No," said Splinter, "anybody that don't know such things as you asked ain't worth talking to."

"Ain't, huh?" Winsor echoed. "I bet you don't know anything either. What is negative electricity?" The boy guessed at a term he had vague memory of having heard somewhere in the past.

"Negative electricity," said Splinter, "is the kind of electricity that ain't positive."

"Ain't then what's positive?" taunted Winsor.

"Aw, shut up, can't you?" cried Splinter. "Can't you see I'm busy? You're too young to understand such things."

"Oh, ho, ho!" laughed his victorious tormentor. "I'm not much younger than you at that. Oh, wowie, you know a lot!" And Winsor walked away laughing as hard as he could, much to the discomfort of the knowing electrician.

The next day was a rainy one. Also the next day was Saturday. Now the combination is enough to make any boy disconsolate. All morning Winsor moped about the house, and stared gloomily out of window at the gray, cheerless sky. Would the downpour never stop? At last he flung himself into a chair.

It happened that the chair had another occupant. Tabby, the big yellow house cat, had been enjoying a sleep in that particular place since morning. And she was too much alarmed to notice the fate which was threatening. She gave one desperate howl, and then dug all her claws upward. Naturally, Winsor jumped, but when he saw what the cause of his alarm was he seized a handy magazine and flung it with all his force at the innocent feline.

Poor puss! But it was not the first time she had fallen a victim to Winsor's rainy Saturday feelings. In time she would learn to avoid the house on such occasions.

But, nevertheless, Winsor was grateful to the cat for the temporary respite the incident had afforded him. For a time he even ceased to think of the rainy day, but after a while all his gloom came back, and this time was stronger than ever. He paced about the house, from room to room, again, and at last determined to try once more a plan which had failed four times already.

"Gee, I'm called," said Winsor, "I go over to Harold's."

The answer came from the kitchen. "I've told you forty times this morning that it was too rainy for you to be out. Now can't you find some way to amuse yourself without going away?"

"Blame it!" muttered the boy. But after all he was not much surprised.

GOOD NEWS for people suffering with PILES, FISTULA, FISSURE and RECTAL DISEASE.

These most annoying and stubborn conditions which have wrecked so many lives have at last been conquered by medical science, and Dr. Goddard who visits Janesville every four weeks, has recently become possessed of an entirely new and positively successful method of treating these conditions, without PAIN, or SUFFERING of any nature, with PERMANENT and LASTING RESULTS.

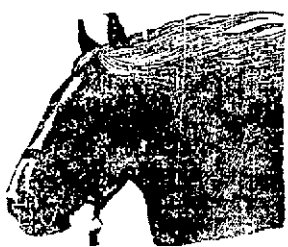

Never in the history of Medicine or Surgery have such brilliant results been obtained by any methods used in the past. This is a very remarkable method and is absolutely PAINLESS, BLOODLESS and absolutely PERMANENT.

If you are a sufferer from any Rectal Disease it will pay you to call and investigate this new treatment.

Dr. Goddard visits Janesville every four weeks and will next be at the GRAND HOTEL ON WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22. Hours 9 A. M. to 4 P. M. No charge for consultation which is absolutely confidential.

Charles Hawk and William Harneck attended a sale near Gibbs Lake Wednesday afternoon.

FOUR OF KAISER'S SONS HAVE BEEN WOUNDED IN WAR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Amsterdam, March 18.—The wounding of Prince Oscar of Germany on the Russian front makes four of the Kaiser's sons who have suffered bodily injury in the war, according to accurate journalistic records here.

Only one son, Prince Frederick, August Wilhelm, the Kaiser's fourth son, was wounded during the battle of the Marne by a bullet in his left arm. The second son, Eitel Frederick, was thrown from his horse in October, 1914, and suffered a damaged leg. Joachim, the sixth son, was wounded by shrapnel in the right thigh in September, 1914. He was also nearly captured by the Russians in the following December. He was rescued by a German aeroplane. Oscar, recently wounded, suffers from palpitation of the heart and collapsed from this complaint after a battle in 1914.

PRICE OF SHOES GOING UP BECAUSE OF SHORTAGE IN THE RAW MATERIALS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Cleveland, O., March 18.—The price of shoes is going up, according to wholesale dealers. The reason will be caused by sharp advances in the cost of raw materials, as a result of the war. With the manufacturer it is not a question of price so much as of a question of raw materials. G. D. Spencer, wholesaler. "Many have not been able to buy more than half the amount they need. While imports of calf skin have decreased 55 per cent, exports have increased 100 per cent, the total exports of leather and skins increased heavily last year, while imports of cattle hides have decreased 300 per cent. As a result, women's shoes and men's 3 1/2 per cent. Some rich kid is being sold at 75 cents a square foot. Even shoe leathers have advanced 300 per cent. This unprecedented situation is caused by the demands by warring nations for soldiers' shoes; 2. Shutting off supplies of leather from Germany and Serbia; 3. England's embargo upon all leathers of the first and second grades from her colonial domains; 4. The Mediterranean situation which cuts off Indian trade.

"LYONS' SAMPLE FAIR" AS A TRADING ATTRACTION.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Paris, March 18.—The new "Lyons' Sample Fair" which opened March 1 has a total of 720 exhibitors and requests have been received from more than 300 houses that cannot be given space.

The fair is not an expectation in the usual sense of the term, because there will be nothing in it to attract the sightseer. It is intended only for business men who want either to buy or to sell. There are no exhibitors from the United States, because there was not time for arrangements, but it is hoped that America will be represented in another year. The exhibitors include 200 Lyons houses, 78 from Switzerland, 29 Italian, 11 English, 2 Canadian, one Spanish, one Russian and one from Holland. The space is filled up entirely by serious branches of industry and commerce such as iron, steel, mechanical and electrical installations, automobiles, hardware, rubber, textiles, hats, shoes, leather, chemicals, dyes, and paper. The fair is held along the quays of the Rhone in specially constructed pine exhibition rooms.

Temperance Talk

(By Temperance Educational League.)
Statement of Governor Locke Craig. The following statement of Governor Locke Craig shows the advantages derived from prohibition in the state of North Carolina. The statement is of interest and educational value and is in part as follows:

"The enactment of a state-wide prohibition law in North Carolina has been of incalculable benefit to this state.

"The prohibition law was passed in 1905. The total receipts of the state government from all sources that year were $2,866,433.02. The total receipts of the government for the year 1915 were $4,705,888.81.

"In 1908, the last year under whisky, the capital stock of state, private and savings banks in North Carolina was $7,602,658. In the year 1915 the capital stock of the same banks was $10,900,048. In 1908, the last year under whisky, the deposits in state, private and savings banks were $31,995,996. In 1915 the same banks had deposits of $61,846,053.

"While in 1908, the last year under whisky, the value of stock in buildings and loans was $4,038,828. In 1915 the value of building and loan stock was $10,646,207.

"While the school population has increased only 8.7 per cent, the enrollment shows an increase of 20.47 per cent and the actual daily attendance shows an increase of a little more than 32 per cent. In other words, since the adoption of prohibition nearly 21 more children out of every 100 of school age have enrolled in the schools, and what is vastly more important than this, 32 more children out of every 100 of school age have actually been at school each day.

"It is not claimed that the greatly improved condition of the state's finances and the condition of the building and loan associations and the condition of the banks is altogether due to the fact that prohibition prevails in this state, but the above figures conclusively show that prohibition has not only not retarded the growth of the state in any way, but that it has aided very materially in making this marked advance on all lines if improvement and progress.

SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION CHANGES ITS NAME TODAY

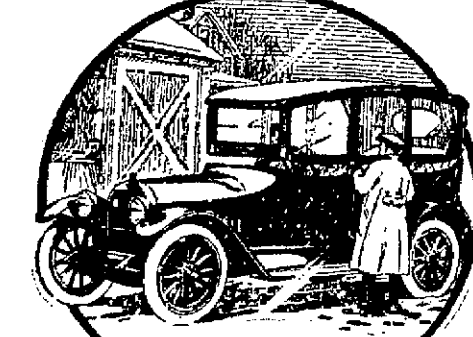

San Diego, Cal., March 18.—The San Diego exposition now in its second year, was rechristened at noon today. "The Panama-California International Exposition—An Exposition of Peace." While San Diego made hostess of the world's fair, the grounds of the palm-girded show city, President Davidson's toast to the exposition and to peace was repeated in States and Canada. Nineteen nations, United States possessions, western and California counties are represented in the exposition. As the chimes of noon struck, Davidson proposed the toast to "an institution which promotes every fruit of civilization that is being destroyed in the other hemisphere," and to fulfillment of "the highest obligations that can devolve on a people's exposition of progress."

F. B. BURTON

Side Lights on the Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later
Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

(Copyrighted.)

It was early in the spring of '78 or '79 that a young man scarcely out of his teens and of slight stature, came to the winter quarters of the Burr Robbins show for a position as driver of the coming season. "Delavan," the boss hostler to whom the young man applied, did not think well of his general appearance and said to him: "Young man, I am afraid you could not stand the hardships of a wagon show." But the young man insisted that he had worked around horses all his life, knew well how to care for them, and many times had driven a four horse team. At that particular time help of all kinds was scarce and the boss hostler finally hired the young man and put him to work.

This was some two weeks before the show left the city, and the young man soon showed himself to be all that he had claimed. He was a high class caretaker and the four horses which he had charge of commenced to show the attention that they were getting at the hands of the new owner. This young man was no other than Frank Palmer, who lost his life last week in the city grovel pit.

Frank stayed with Burr Robbins some four or five years, and later went to the street, no longer teaming around the winter quarters. This young man soon showed himself to be all that he had claimed. He was a high class caretaker and the four horses which he had charge of commenced to show the attention that they were getting at the hands of the new owner. This young man was no other than Frank Palmer, who lost his life last week in the city grovel pit.

He was always quiet and unassuming, and where Frank had four or an eight horse team in charge when the parade was pulled out on the lot ready for the street, no boss hostler that Frank Palmer ever worked for worried about his turnout, for they knew that it would be right in every particular.

After leaving the Ringlings, Frank went to the Gollmar Bros. show, where he stayed several years, and two years ago was assistant boss hostler with that show. Early in May I spent a day at Fort Atkinson with the Gollmar show, and much of my time was spent visiting Frank and rehearsing over old days with the Burr Robbins show when they went by wagon.

Frank Palmer left a widow and one son. Wednesday evening of this week I had a visit with them at the home on Center street, and they had just received a letter from Gollmar Brothers, at Baraboo, asking Frank to come on the coming season and take his position. The Gollmars had not heard of his death and were anxious to have him join for the coming season.

At the time I visited him two years ago at Fort Atkinson Frank held the lines over the eight horses on the band wagon, and when they pulled out on the lot ready for the street, it was as fine a turnout or a size of it as I ever saw ahead of a parade. The horses were snow white, all the brass on the harnesses was polished, and everything about the band wagon and the horses and harness of which Frank Palmer had charge looked like new.

Mr. Gollmar told me it never made any difference to Frank whether he got his breakfast or dinner, for it was always his horses first. Many a time he would hear the last call for breakfast when the show would be late into town but this cut no figure with Frank if his horses had not been looked after.

He worked many years under Spencer Alexander, better known as "Delavan," both with the Burr Robbins and later with the Ringling show, and although I never traveled with Frank after he left the Burr Robbins show, yet I always kept in close touch with him, always knew what show he was with during the season, and in the winter time more than once I spent hours visiting with him and rehearsing old incidents that happened years before, and I knew of no one in his line of work in the business that left a better name than did Frank Palmer.

That he should meet death in the way he did here, he was a man going through so many hardships and taking so many chances in the days of the wagon show, many times forcing streams where bridges had been washed away, and on all night dark drives, is said, but it seems that it had to be so. His many friends with the different shows that he had traveled with will have only the kindest of words for Frank Palmer.

Some five or six years ago, while visiting with him, he asked me if I remembered the young man that I picked up by the roadside on the Kansas when we were with the Burr Robbins show.

"You know," said Frank, "he was so sick that he could not and it to ride on one of the big rough wagons, and lay down by the roadside until you came along, and you took him in your carriage and brought him into town, and got him a room at the hotel."

I had forgotten all this until Frank brought it to my mind, but all that was the matter with this young man was that he was homesick. He had joined out some two weeks before with the show and was working on canvas, but he had evidently thought that he would have a great deal of time to listen to the band play and watch the show. But when he had to work day times and travel nights he soon got homesick and did not have money enough to get home, so he played off sick. I got him a room at the hotel, drew what money he had coming, and collected twelve or fifteen dollars from the people around the show, and left it with him to come on as soon as he got better. But in two or three days I got a letter from the landlord saying that my sick man had slipped out of the hotel and took the first train going toward his home. The landlord ventured to say that he thought this would be his last engagement with the circus. He had been there long enough to learn that it was an easy place to raise money for one that was sick or down and out, and he took this means of getting away from the show with money to get home. But this is the only incident of its kind that ever came under my notice while I was in the business.

Some two or three years after I was out and away from the business, it happened in Chicago, and as usual went out to Cole & Middleton's museum on Clark street, for I could always find someone there to visit with. There met an old friend that had been with the Forepaugh show for some years, and had charge of one of the stands where where sold candy and popcorn. He said to me: "I don't look to me like very much of a business." "Well," he said, "I got tired of the circus and had to do something else, and it seemed to be the only thing in sight."

"Why don't you get a position traveling on the road selling goods?" I asked. "You have a good appearance, you are a very good story teller and all around good mixer, and I think you could surely make good with any kind of a line of goods that you know something about."

"Why, Dave," he said, "I am the last man that could go on the road and sell goods. There are men on the road selling goods that could sell mud for breakfast food, where I could not sell fish on Friday in a Catholic community. No use talking to me about a position of that kind. I expect that the best thing for me to do is to stay here until the show starts again and go back into the old business."

But this he did not get a chance to do, for it was only a few weeks later that he was taken sick with pneumonia and died. He was buried by friends in Chicago, and the Showmen's League of America will see that Charlie's grave is strewn with flowers on every Decoration day.

Many people in Janesville and the surrounding country will remember well the clown that took the part of the baseball catcher both with the Ringling and Barnum shows. His legal name was Frank Oakley, but he was known for some years in the business as "Silver." The following letter to the particular "Silver" said ending, and also tells of the adoption of his only child, a girl of some seven or eight years of age, by baraboo rider, and the famous De Mott family who for three or four years in the 70's were with the Burr Robbins show, and I think the last of Josie De Mott's baraboo riding was the last season of the Barnum show in Janesville, under the management of James A. Bailey, where Josie De Mott was the principal rider. She is one of the finest women that I ever knew, and "Silver's" only child is certainly fortunate in finding a home with Josie De Mott Robinson. The letter follows:

"Frank Oakley, the 'Joey,' known the country over as 'Silver,' is gone. He was found dead from gas asphyxiation early on the morning of the 8th house on West Seventh street by the police, who had smashed away a barricade of tables and chairs he had been against the door the evening before, when he decided to end his life. As soon as the news became known there were many conjectures as to the cause of Oakley's committing the act. Some said he had feared his popularity was waning, others that he had become impoverished, and still others said it was because a young woman who was sentenced to the Bedford reformatory in 1914 on his complaint refused to marry him."

"Silver" was one of the highest salaried clowns in the show business. His specialty was to imitate a baseball catcher, using a bird cage for a mask and a washboard for a chest protector. He was about forty-five years old.

Frank Silvers (Oakley) was born in Sweden. His parents were concert singers who came to this country when he was very young. He found his way into the circus ring when sixteen years of age. Later he was urged by his family to give up circus life and go to the University of Michigan, but he finally consented, but two years later again found him under the big top.

Starting out with the Andrew McDonald circus, Oakley gradually kept rising until he became star clown with Barnum & Bailey and Ringling Bros. circuses. He also appeared in vaudeville and at the New York Garden and Hippodrome at various times. In 1902 he married Nellie Dunbar, a Janesville singer, who died in 1913, leaving a daughter, Ruth, who is now being cared for at the home of Mrs. Josephine De Mott Robinson, formerly a famous circus baraboo rider, under the name of Josie De Mott, at Hempstead, Long Island.

The funeral was held on the 10th of this month from the Stephen Merritt undertaking establishment, in the cemetery at Mount Olivet cemetery, Brooklyn.

The veteran Lee Tannehill has been signed to play third base with the South Bend Central league team.

BELOIT COLLEGE PROFESSOR TALKS BEFORE MEN'S CLUB

(Special to the Gazette.)

Edgerton, March 18.—Dean Collie of Beloit college gave an address last evening at the home of Andrew McIntosh to the Men's club of the Congregational church at the weekly meeting. He first gave the positions of all the colonies in Africa and pointed out the different ones lost by the Germans during the war. He was then assisted by Will Bardeen in a series of stereopticon views which he had taken on his trip through Africa in 1910 and with his explanatory talk gave the large audience a very good idea of the conditions as they actually existed before the war relative to the mode of living, the nature of the country architecture and the dress of the people of Africa. Dean Collie is a very interesting talker and his lecture was very much appreciated. The program was concluded with refreshments and cigars.

Overland

SIX

$1145

Model 86 f. o. b. Toledo

No Advance In Price

The price of the big, powerful Overland Six (Model 86) will not be advanced.

Prices of other Sixes are advancing. Prices of Sixes recently announced on new models, are higher. In fact, comparatively figuring, prices of practically all Sixes are now far in excess of the Overland.

On the basis of present prices of raw materials a Six of the Overland quality would have to sell at a much higher price.

But due to a little foresight in purchasing we escaped having to pay premiums for raw materials—hence the price of the Overland Six is not increased.

This in spite of the fact that prices of all steels are up from 100% to 150%; that the price of aluminum has gone from about 20 cents a pound to over 50 cents a pound; that the price of copper has more than doubled; that tires and other accessories have had a sharp advance.

We cannot guarantee that this present price of $1145 will hold indefinitely.

The serious condition of the material market makes that impossible.

But the quality is not lowered; and for the present price is not advanced.

Just compare the size, power, flexibility and quality of the Overland Six motor; the length of the wheelbase—the seating capacity, the finish, the equipment, the comforts, the conveniences and improvements of the Overland Six with all others and you'll find no valid reason for paying more than $1145 for a six cylinder automobile.

Deliveries now.

An Inexpensive Cottage Bungalow Home of Character No. 236

This attractive cottage, of the bungalow type, is shown with two attractive yet radically different exteriors.

The cost of each of these cottages was $2000. At the present time they probably could be built for $1800, with good materials and workmanship.

The living room, dining room and front bedroom are unusually large for a house of its size, and the kitchen arrangement is good.

The columned opening between living room and dining room and open stairway are attractive features. The dining room may be placed at the side or rear, and the vestibule can be omitted if desired. The basement has cement floor and contains hot air furnace, laundry trays, hot water heater, coal bin and fruit closet. Vitreous china or enameled iron bathroom fixtures would be suitable.

If you intend to build, ask any questions you want. Just give number of house, and address your letter to "Homes of Character Dept." The Gazette. No charge for answers.

Special Sale and Demonstration

"Model" Collapsible Adjustable Dress Forms

On Monday, March 20th, an expert will give a demonstration on the use of Adjustable Forms and a

Free Lecture On Dressmaking

Come and be taught how to double your wardrobe at half of your usual cost. Bring your dressmaking problems to our Dress Forms department and they will be solved for you by our expert free of charge. Every problem of fitting can be solved on the "Model" collapsible, adjustable Dress Form. Our expert will show you how.

We Will Put On Sale Five Styles of Adjustable Forms, 8 Section, 12 Section, 16 Section, 17 Section and 20 Section Forms. All at Special Prices.

With the aid of a tape line and by simply pulling the different sections out to proportions desired, you can reproduce your exact figure lines. These adjustable forms can be collapsed while adjusted to the required proportions of the user. They are absolutely automatic and independent in their adjustments. All adjustments are made from outside of form by merely pulling out the various parts to desired size. No wheels or ratchets to turn, nor is it necessary to insert the hands inside of form to make adjustments.
